Los Angeles, 10.09.2019, 23:09 Time

My Green Network - In April 2020, My Green Network ('MyGN') will launch a dynamic platform for the first, true cannabis coworking space to empower anyone from entrepreneurs to established enterprises across the United States easy access to America's cannabis capital: California. MyGN penetrates the barriers-to-entry of the ultra-regulated cannabis industry's by providing a home, a network, and compliance.

The average cost to start a cannabis business is $750,000 with approximately 12+ months of lead time.

As a result:

- Only the top 5% can afford market entry
- Existing businesses can't scale
- Megacorporations are absorbing smaller companies

"MyGN was inspired by WeWork's lifestyle-centric community and modern-day food and tech incubators to fix the cannabis industry."- James Shih, Founder.

MyGN eliminates capital expenditure and development times by providing cost-effective solutions ensuring success for even non-cannabis businesses through:

- Fully-equipped cannabis-compliant suites
- An on-site marketplace for THC/CBD
- Comprehensive support for compliance, distribution, and sales

How It Works:

Leaders. Empowering. Community. is the ethos of this company. Their members, known as "Green Leaders":

- (1) Will own their cannabis manufacturing license
- (2) Can create any edible, topical, or beverage product
- (3) Can package and sell all cannabis products
- (4) Can sell throughout California

The global coworking trend influences every industry from tech companies to kitchen incubators. The benefits are undeniable: reduced overhead, collaborative environments, and simplified compliance for restricted industries like cannabis.

If other states follow California's leading regulations allowing a "Type-S" License permitting cannabis coworking - this would advance the cannabis industry cementing the United States as a global leader in cannabis business, creativity, and equality.
